President's Message

Some of us just returned from the ANA World's Fair of Money in Chicago (Rosemont, Illinois, actually). Rosemont is adjacent to Chicago's busy O'Hare Airport – close enough that I think every plane that took off or landed flew right over my motel!

MSNA Treasurer and Maryland Numismatist Editor Simcha Kuritzky continued to garner awards (seven if my math is correct!) for his well-researched exhibits (details elsewhere in this publication). He and MSNA Secretary Bryce Doxzon also served as exhibit judges.

The ANA conventions provide a variety of activities in addition to the bourse floor. Clubs of all types hold meetings, there are talks regarding many numismatic themes, book signings, “meet-and-greet” events with ANA officials, extensive exhibits, awards luncheons and dinners (I went to the PCGS Set Registry Luncheon), seminars and educational programs. It is too bad that this event won't be coming to Baltimore in the foreseeable future* but we can console ourselves that we have more major shows (three) than any other region.

Speaking of the ANA, MSNA's VP Scott Barman received a good number of votes for ANA governor but regrettably, it was not enough to unseat an incumbent. Scott has some good ideas – we hope that he runs again!

Two dates to remember:

❶ September 13, 10 AM – the Launch of the Fort McHenry Quarter, Maryland's entry in the America the Beautiful series. The event will be held – where else – at Fort McHenry!

❷ September 22 – the BANC show at its normal location on Cromwell Bridge Road.

* Editor's note: VP Scott Barman is leading the campaign to bring the ANA World's Fair of Money to DC in 2017.

Karen Lee Fifth Distinguished Lecturer

The fifth speaker in the Maryland State Numismatic Association (MSNA) annual Distinguished Lecturer Series was Curator Karen M. Lee of the National Numismatic Collection housed at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History. She spoke on George T. Morgan's sketch book and autographed copies of her book, The Private Sketchbook of George T. Morgan, America's Silver Dollar Artist. The sketchbook includes drawings made over several decades. Many were what we would call industrial design; in the Victorian era even something as practical as an iron grating was expected to be aesthetically pleasing. There were also drawings related to pattern coins and also medals he designed while still living in England. Morgan came to the United States because the Royal Mint staff was dominated by a cadre of big-name artisans, though there is evidence that Morgan assisted with some of the design or engravings of British coins and medals.

Ms. Lee also displayed Richard Doty's last book Pictures From a Distant Country: Seeing America Through Old Paper Money. Richard Doty was her boss until his passing on June 2. Richard had originally agreed to be MSNA's fifth distinguished lecturer but begged off due to illness. This book was one of several designed to bring the Smithsonian's extensive numismatic collection into people's homes. It pictures many rare notes from the pre-Civil War era.

The last topic Ms. Lee discussed was the upcoming expansion and renovation of the numismatic collection space at the National Museum of American History. Currently, the collection only has an alcove, though it is filled with rarities such as all three types of 1804 dollars (including the unique type 2) and the unique 1849 double eagle. Ms. Lee's background is in museum design.

The Lincoln-Kennedy Coincidences

Abraham Lincoln was elected to Congress in 1846.

John F. Kennedy was elected to Congress in 1946.

Abraham Lincoln was elected President in 1860.

John F. Kennedy was elected President in 1960.

The names Lincoln and Kennedy each contain seven letters.

Both were particularly concerned with civil rights.

Both wives lost their children while living in the White House.

Both Presidents were shot on a Friday.

Both were shot in the head.

Lincoln's secretary, Kennedy, warned him not to go to the theater.

Kennedy's secretary, Lincoln, warned him not to go to Dallas.

Both were assassinated by Southerners.

Both were succeeded by Southerners.

Both successors were named Johnson.

Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, was born in 1808.

Lyndon Johnson, who succeeded Kennedy, was born in 1908.

John Wilkes Booth was born in 1839.

Lee Harvey Oswald was born in 1939.

Both assassins were known by their three names.

Both names are comprised of fifteen letters.

Booth ran from the theater and was caught in a warehouse.

Oswald ran from a warehouse and was caught in a theater.

Booth and Oswald were both assassinated before their trials.

Satire: The Lincoln-Kennedy Coincidences

November 20 will mark a half century since Kennedy's assassination. You've heard about all the strange coincidences between Lincoln and Kennedy a dozen times at least, but what about these?

- Both Lincoln and Kennedy died in their last term of office (the first term for Kennedy and the second for Lincoln).
- Kennedy fought in a war (World War Two) while Lincoln's election started one (Civil War).
- Both presidents faced down a threat from the south (CSA for Lincoln, Cuba for Kennedy).
- Kennedy was born into a wealthy family while Lincoln (born poor) married into a wealthy family.
- Kennedy was from one of the easternmost states in the Union (Massachusetts) while Lincoln was from one of the (then) westernmost states (Kentucky).
- All but one of Lincoln's children died in childhood, and all but one of Kennedy's brothers survived him.
- Lincoln was portrayed on banknotes during his lifetime, and Kennedy spent banknotes during his lifetime.
- Lincoln was the first assassinated president to be portrayed on a regular-issue coin (44 years later) while Kennedy was the last (2 months later).
- Lincoln was assassinated while on a trip to a local theater, while Kennedy was assassinated on a trip half-way across the country.
- Lincoln was born in a log cabin and had a log cabin toy named after him, while Kennedy drove a car and had a highway named after him. Lincoln also had a car named after him, but he never drove one.
- Both Lincoln cents and Kennedy half dollars have been produced annually since 1964. The cent has the highest mintages of any circulating U.S. coin, while the half dollar has among the lowest.

First Ladies: Mary Todd Lincoln - Jacqueline Kennedy Onasis

- Both are known by three names (Mary during her first marriage, Jacqueline during her second).
- A few years after their respective husbands' assassinations, Mary Todd Lincoln was committed to an insane asylum, while Jacqueline Kennedy married jet-setting billionaire Aristotle Onassis making many women insanely jealous.

Just Three Half Dollars to Start

By Mark Benvenuto, MSNA R-825

Sometimes great collections are started by chance; sometimes they start on a whim; and sometimes, they start by design. If you are the type of collector who falls in the last category, one fascinating way to begin collecting half dollars is to start with just three: a Kennedy, a Franklin, and a Walking Liberty. From here, all sorts of possibilities appear. But let's be specific about our three starter coins.

The Proof 1964 Kennedy half

It never seems as if there are many collectors who attempt an entire date and mint mark run of Kennedy halves. Perhaps they consider them too modern in that some are still being produced each year. But the one year in which they were 90% silver remains a type set coin that plenty of us want to add to our collections. The good news in this case is that even if you land something like a proof-67 specimen, the cost isn't too high. It only takes $50 or so to buy into the club, as it were. With that kind of grade, be sure to buy only an encapsulated piece – but still, $50 for a coin in this high grade is a bargain.

A Proof or a Full-Bell Line Franklin

Franklin halves are another series that may not get its fair share of the limelight. It's not because of an issue with silver. They're all 90% silver. No, it's probably because the Walking Liberty halves (which we'll discuss in a moment) have always been the bigger collector draw. But precisely because of this, there are numerous Franklin half dollars that are rather affordable.

There are proof Franklin halves for almost the entire run of the series. First issued as proofs in 1950, they generally ascend in mintage totals until some very high ones in the late 1950's and the 1960's. Today, any proof Franklin makes an excellent choice for a growing type set. The earliest date that probably qualifies as inexpensive is 1954. The Mint cranked out 233,300 of them that year, all as part of official proof sets. Today, most of those sets have been broken up, which means it's not too hard to find a single proof of that date.

There is another way to go about looking for the best possible Franklin half dollar, and that is trying to get your hands on what is called a full bell line specimen. Often abbreviated FBL, these Franklins show the lines on the Liberty Bell that dominates the reverse with no small breaks or smeared areas. Not all of the coins struck up this well and thus FB coins command a premium.

How much you choose to pay for a single Franklin half dollar is obviously up to you, but $100 can get quite a bit when it comes to these fifty cent pieces. Even some of the FBL coins are available in this range. Some patience and a keen eye may land you a very good type coin.

The Best Walking Liberty

This half dollar design may be one of the most collected of all United States coins. In the upper grades of mint state, plenty of these seem to be the type of coins that headline auctions. So it might come as a surprise to know that there are a few dates and mint marks within the Walking Liberty half series that can be purchased in premium grades at less than exorbitant prices.

To prove out point, look at the 1945, the 1945-D, and the 1946-D. None of these are the most common coins within the Walking Liberty series, although none is extremely rare either. But each of them can be found in grades like MS-66. That's not a typo or error; we're talking MS-66 as opposed to MS-65. And as of this writing, those high grades still only cost about $200 each. That can make an excellent type coin and start point for any collection of fifty-cent pieces.

If you don't want to start at the end, as it were, look elsewhere in the Walking Liberty half series to see what is available. The 1917 coins from Philadelphia are the first that post higher than 10 million on the official Mint tallies. Coins in the MS range will not automatically be cheap here, but they won't cost the proverbial arm and a leg, either. Another early date and mint mark with a high mintage is the 1918-S. It might just be worth searching out as an excellent type coin.

From There?

Once you have assembled your personal trio of half dollars, where do you go next? Well, there certainly are plenty of options. A person could stay with Kennedy halves. If you can find a bank that stocks them, you might be able to cherry pick rolls to see how complete a collection you could find just from circulation (or from that particular bank). You could choose to assemble a date run of Franklin half dollars in the highest condition you can afford. You could see about putting together a collection of all FBL Franklin halves. That certainly would be both a challenge as well as a lot of fun. Or you could take the plunge into collecting Walking Liberty halves. There are some amazing coins in this area, but some high prices as well. Whatever you choose though, these three half dollars can open up some fun, new worlds for just about any collector.

The 80th Anniversary of Unintended Consequences

By Scott Barman

Franklin Delano Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1933 at the height of the Great Depression. Unemployment was over 25 percent, deflation was rampant, farm prices had plummeted so low that it was cheaper for farmers to plow under crops, and banks were failing in record numbers.

Two weeks prior to his inauguration, FDR asked his old friend and Wall Street executive William H. Woodin to be the Secretary of the Treasury and help implement a new monetary policy. Woodin rushed to Washington to work with Ogden Mills, President Herbert Hoover's Secretary of the Treasury, in order to understand the issues. On the day of FDR's inauguration, Mills resigned and voluntarily stayed in Washington to help Woodin with various policy changes. Hours after FDR's inauguration, the Senate approved the appointment of Woodin as the Secretary of the Treasury. With his new Treasury Secretary in place, Woodin's first act was to declare a three-day bank holiday in order to try to stop the failures.

One of the problems facing Woodin was the amount of gold leaving the United States and being used for overseas trade. More gold was leaving the Treasury than they were taking in. At Woodin's urging, FDR signed Executive Order (EO) 6102 recalling all privately held gold. This executive order required everyone to return his or her gold to the Federal Reserve by May 1, 1933 in exchange for $20.67 per troy ounce (equivalent to $369.72 in today's purchasing power). EO 6102 specifically exempted certain industrial uses of gold, art, and allowed people to keep up to $100 in face value in gold coins. It also exempted "gold coins having recognized special value to collectors of rare and unusual coins." The protection of collectible coins was credited to Woodin since he was a collector of coins and patterns he acquired while director of the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Although most of the country complied with the executive order, some challenged the law and started to sue the government to stop the gold recall. With the challenges mounting, on June 5, 1933, Congress formally took the United States off the gold standard by enacting a joint resolution nullifying the right of creditors to demand payment in gold.

For weeks after FDR issued EO 6102, the U.S. Mint continued strike gold double eagle coins because they did not have an order to stop. After receiving the stop work order, the coins were stored until they were ordered melted in 1934. Even though every gold coin in the Mint's cashier's room was supposed to have been melted, several examples of the 1933 Saint Gaudens double eagle gold coin did find its way out of the Mint. While most were tracked, confiscated, and melted, one example found its way to Egypt into the collection of King Farouk. This was believed to be the coin that was sold in 2002 for $7,590,020 ($20 was given to the government to monetize the coin) to a private collector. Half of the proceeds were paid to the government as part of a settlement with British coin dealer Stephen Fenton, who was arrested trying to sell the coin at New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel in 1998.

But that does not end the story of the 1933 Saint Gaudens double eagle. Since the sale of the only legal tender coin, the family of the late jeweler and coin dealer Israel Switt found ten 1933 double eagles. These coins are known as the "Langboard Hoard," named for Joan Langbord, the daughter of Israel Switt, who claims to have found the coins while searching through her father's old goods. On more than one occasion, Switt has been accused of being the source of the 1933 Double Eagle coins that made it out of the Philadelphia Mint. In 2003, Langbord sent the coins to the U.S. Mint for authentication even knowing the history of these coins. It had taken the U.S. Mint a while to report on the coins' authenticity, but when they did determine them genuine, the government confiscated them. Langbord and her sons subsequently sued the government for the return of the coins. Barry Berke, the same attorney that represented Stephen Fenton in his case against the government, represents the Langbord family.

In July 2011, a jury ruled that the 10 coins in the Langbord Hoard belong to the government. U.S. District Judge Legrome Davis Jr. upheld the jury's decision saying, "The records show that no such transaction occurred...What's more, this absence of a paper trail speaks to criminal intent. If whoever took or exchanged the coins thought he was doing no wrong, we would expect to see some sort of documentation reflecting the transaction." Judge Davis ordered that the coins to be confiscated but not destroyed. Berke has said he would appeal the ruling.

The story of 1933 Saint Gaudens double eagle is truly an example of the law of unintended consequences. In an effort to rescue the economy, the cascading series of events that took the United States off the gold standard turned what was supposed to be an ordinary coin into one of the most intriguing stories of the 20th and now 21st century.

Researching the SDA Davidians

By Simcha Kuritzky

The SCRIP note looked like something that fit into two of my collecting specialties: the facing lion figure fit into my feline collection and the name Bank of Palestina implied it was Judaica, though the Waco, Texas address told me it was probably Judeo-Christian and not Jewish. I didn't give much thought to this note or the matching cardboard coins until I saw an article in the March, 2005 issue of The Numismatist identified these tokens as coming from the Seventh Day Adventist Davidians. I researched the organization and put together an exhibit with the material I had. The book Mad Man of Waco included a photograph of a $10 note with a credit to the Texas Museum of Baylor University (located in Waco). On a business trip to Dallas in July, I rented a car and drove down to Baylor to inspect what they had.

When I talked to one of the librarians about my research, he asked me if I'd like to see the duplicate notes, and brought me a box filled with material. A search of their other collections turned up 5 boxes of records from the Davidian treasury, including the original printing plates and batches of coin and note tokens that had been "defaced" and redeemed from 1944-1957. Searching through the stacks of notes I found many had been canceled. The paper clips that kept the redemption receipt together with the notes or an envelope of coins that had been redeemed were all rusty, and there was only a sticky residue where rubber bands had once held stacks of notes together. It was a researcher's dream!

The December journal will include an article with my photographs and findings on the Davidian SCRIP along with a brief history of the group. I only wish I had had more than three hours to go through the material.

Local News

Although the Mint released the new Ft. McHenry quarters on August 26, the official striking ceremony will not take place until Friday, September 13, the anniversary of the 1814 Battle of Baltimore. Members of the public are encouraged to attend. The ceremony will begin at 10 AM.

The American Numismatic Association (ANA) awarded The Maryland Numismatist third place in the Outstanding Local Club Publication contest. Editor Simcha Kuritzky accepted the award at the Club Representatives meeting at the World's Fair of Money in Chicago. MSNA member club Washington Numismatic Society won first place for electronic newsletter; Wayne Wilcox is their editor.

MSNA Vice President Scott Barman unsuccessfully ran for governor of the American Numismatic Association in a crowded field of 14 candidates for 7 positions.

Martin Solano spoke on the use of coins in archeological dating at the Montgomery County Coin Club in June, and his boss Julian Leidman spoke on the state of the numismatic industry in July. The August meeting highlighted a wrap-up on the ANA World's Fair of Money.

MSNA Treasurer and Editor Simcha Kuritzky exhibited at the ANA's World's Fair of Money in Chicago. His Redemption of Firstborn exhibit (which won first place in this year's MSNA competition) won first in Tokens and third-place Best of Show; his Henrietta Szold exhibit (which was shown at this year's MSNA competition) won first place in Middle East, the Heritage Coins in History award, and the Women in Numismatics award; his Ba'al Shem Tov amulet engraved coins exhibit (which won first place in last year's MSNA competition) took second place in Engraved Coins; and his exhibit on Expo '70 won first place in Convention Theme.

Local dealer and researcher David Schenkman won the ANA's Numismatist of the Year award, and local author Roger Burdette won the Numismatic Literary Guild's Book of the Year award for From Mine to Mint and Best U.S. Book for United States Pattern & Experimental Pieces of WWII. If you would like to meet him, he is scheduled to pick up his awards at the September meetings of the Montgomery County Coin Club (September 10) and Washington Numismatic Society (September 17).

What's Your Sign?

Part Nineteen: German Video Tokens

by Simcha Kuritzky, NLG

Last time I described medals that appeared in both English and German, so this time I'm discussing the only complete set I have of German zodiac pieces. I think these were tokens for video game machines. I have divided them into four types. All bi-metallic, types A-C are steel surrounding a brass core, but type D is the other way around. Types A and B have a cartoon figure on the back that looks like an anthropomorphic four-leaf clover, and types C and D have just a plain rectangle in back. Types A, C, and D have five copies of the sigil on the outer ring obverse, but type B has a repeating ringed planet, crescent moon, five-pointed star, and sun with rays (or maybe it's a comet). Below is the list of what versions I have seen of which sign. It's possible that each sign exists in all four types.

|   | ring-core   | back       | outer ring      |
|---|-------------|------------|-----------------|
| A | steel-brass | clover man | sigil           |
| B | steel-brass | clover man | heavenly bodies |
| C | steel-brass | rectangle  | sigil           |
| D | brass-steel | rectangle  | sigil           |

| Zodiac Sign |            | Types |   |
|-------------|------------|-------|---|
| ♈           | Widder     | A     | C |
| ♉           | Stier      | A     | D |
| ♊           | Zwilling   | A     |   |
| ♋           | Krebs      | A     |   |
| ♌           | Lowe       | A     |   |
| ♍           | Jungfrau   | A     |   |
| ♎           | Waage      | A     |   |
| ♏           | Skorpion   | A     |   |
| ♐           | Schutze    | A     |   |
| ♑           | Steinbock  | A     | C |
| ♒           | Wassermann |       | B |
| ♓           | Fische     | A     | C |
